The Sisters in Time series presents American historical fiction for girls 8 to 12. Explore America's heritage with young heroines who solve mysteries, explore frontiers, fight injustice and conquer a growing nation with faith and courage. About "American Progress (4 in 1) (Sisters In Time Series)" There are four complete novels in each volume of this popular historical fiction series. Each story is set during a fascinating time in the history of the United States of America. The "Sisters in Time" are children's books with an agenda; to promote the authors' religious point of view. Which is fine, as long as the reader is not expecting an accurate version of historical events. More importantly, the writing is ABSOLUTELY TERRIBLE. You would have to go a long way to find books more poorly written. This collection brings together four historical fiction books for 8–12-year-old girls: Maureen the Detective: The Age of Immigration (covering the year 1903),
