

Download Apartheid Education Black South Africans

Apartheid was a system of government in South Africa, abolished in 1994, which systematically separated groups on the basis of race classification. Apartheid was more corrupt than any other system Black South Africans can come up with. That's for sure. However, this was the doing of White South Africans. This happened all over Africa. If White people were not giving Blacks a proper education, it makes things harder for the people to engage in their government. Laws from South Africa's Apartheid Era In May of 1902 the Peace of Vereeniging was signed between Boer forces and the British (putting an end to a set of wars between the two sides). After a few years, the former Boer republics joined with the British territories and, in May of 1910, they formed the Union of South Africa. The 1953 Bantu Education Act was one of apartheid's most offensively racist laws. It brought African education under control of the government and extended apartheid to black schools. Previously, most African schools were run by missionaries with some state aid.
