Richard Yates, who was born 1926 in Yonkers, New York and died 1992 in Birmingham, Alabama, seemed to be a writer who described his own career by the titles of his books. Richard Yates wrote "Revolutionary Road", an excellent novel portraying suburban discontent in the 50's. "Disturbing The Peace" is set in the 60's and features more suburban discontent in the form of a 39 year old advertising salesman who is afflicted with alcoholism and psychosis as he acts out an enormous midlife crisis. I found the former to be a much more satisfying book than the latter; one was great, but I found the other to be somewhat dated and shallow. Disturbing the Peace is a novel by American writer Richard Yates. First published in 1975, Yates' fourth book concerns the psychological breakdown and subsequent institutionalization of an alcoholic salesman.
