Year Details; 1903: Public library (not free) opens at East Toronto. Eventually two libraries are provided, one at Danforth Avenue and Dawes Road and the other in the YMCA building on the east side of Main Street between Gerrard Street and Danforth Avenue. The Main Library serves as the hub of the Library system as well as the “neighborhood library” for thousands of downtown workers and residents. With one of the finest collections of materials among U.S. public libraries, the Main Library attracts more than one million users annually. The Main Street Public Library database reproduces the collections of five public libraries from the American Midwest for the period from 1890 to 1970.
