2. Rachel, doing business as Wildlife Interiors, produces and sells synthetic animal heads as display pieces for commercial establishments. Banana Republic operates a chain of stores that sells safari clothing and accessories. O'SCANNLAIN, Circuit Judge: Peter Rachel, a producer of realistic reproductions of jungle animals, brought this action against Banana Republic, Fisher Development, and The Gap for alleged trade dress and copyright infringement. In early 1984 Banana Republic terminated its business with Rachel and began purchasing its animal displays from Fred Funk, a consultant to Fisher Development hired to improve the quality of the Banana Republic's interior special effects.
