The Apple in the Dark is the third novel I've read by author Clarice Lispector. While I didn't quite enjoy it as much as The Hour of the Star (one of my favorite novels in general) or The Stream of Life, I found it to be in line with her other works in terms of quality and writing. Lispector's writing is unlike anything else. On the surface, the story in The Apple in the Dark could not be simpler. A man commits a crime, flees into the desolate interior of Brazil, arrives at a remote farm, is taken on as a farmhand, is ...I first read "The Apple In The Dark" in college for a Third-World Literature class (not to belabor this point, but it fulfilled an upper-level general education requirement, which is the only reason why I was enrolled in the course). Clarice Lispector is one of Brazil's more interesting, inventive younger novelists, highly conscious of the modern European movements, both in thought and style.
