I only discovered Lawrence Osborne a few weeks ago after reading a review of his newest novel in the New York Times. I have now finished Hunters in the Dark (likewise an extraordinary novel) & The Ballad of a Small Player. He's definitely his own man in terms of style but somewhere in the realm of Nabokov, Dostoevsky (as has been said elsewhere this novel is quite Dostoevskyan), Anthony Burgess & Graham Greene, in my view. I look forward to reading all his work.
