About The Grass Is Always Greener over the Septic Tank “[Erma Bombeck] is marvelously funny, direct as a hypodermic, a virtuoso in the field of suburban living.”—Erma Bombeck’s The Grass is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank is about her life moving to suburbia as a young mother in the 1940’s. The suburbs were a new idea at that time, and Erma chronicles—with her unique humor—how the suburbs and family life grew in that area. In 1978, she failed with the television pilot of The Grass is Always Greener on CBS. In 1981, [7] then Bombeck wrote and produced her own show, the also unsuccessful Maggie , for ABC. It aired for just four months (eight episodes) to poor reviews; nevertheless the show meant that Bombeck was becoming quickly overworked, returning from Los Angeles to Phoenix only during weekends.
