Body snatching became so prevalent that it was not unusual for relatives and friends of someone who had just died to watch over the body until burial, and then to keep watch over the grave after burial, to stop it being violated. The East End lies east of the Roman and medieval walls of the City of London, and north of the River Thames. Aldgate Pump, on the edge of the City, is regarded as the symbolic start of the East End. A November 7, 1934 edition of Southern Tidings (newsletter of the Southern Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists) takes note of the emergence of a persistent thorn in the flesh of Adventist doctrine.
